

Aldric: The Mentor

Aldric's teaching was not formalized. There were no lessons, no progression, no structure. Instead, Aldric brought Aisen into his life and showed him how to exist as a Flux-user in a world that wanted to kill Flux-users.

The First Rule: Observe before acting.

Aldric would take Aisen to the marketplace and point out small things: how the soldiers moved in patterns, how the nobles touched their servants differently than their peers, how information flowed from certain people and was suppressed from others.

The Broken Ones

Caspian listened in silence. He had learned that silence could be a kind of recognition when words were too expensive.